

ETFI Theatre Practicum: Theatre out of the box

The ETFI Theatre Practicum is a hands-on workshop exploring “theatre out of the box” through brilliant storytelling of selected scenes from Anton Chekhov’s The Three Sisters. Alongside Shakespeare, Chekhov stands among the most performed playwrights in history, staged across Europe, Asia, the Americas, and Australia. These two masters captured the essence of human nature in ways that remain relevant across centuries.

Their plays are timeless as they reveal the psychology, communication, and struggles that have shaped humanity for centuries, struggles we continue facing today. By decoding their messages, we uncover insights that can help us navigate and understand the complexities of human relationships and contemporary challenges.

In this practicum, you’ll engage in text and drama analysis, step into the shoes of Chekhov’s characters, explore the deeper layers of meaning behind their words, and connect historical human experiences to modern world. You’ll gain tools to interpret human behavior, strengthen communication, and apply these lessons in your professional and personal life.

This practicum is open to everyone, not just theatre artists. Psychologists, doctors, business professionals, journalists, educators, and anyone interested in understanding human nature will find value in this experience.

The practicum runs every month. If you can’t join on the proposed dates, sign up anyway. We’ll share alternative dates, so you never miss the chance to experience the timeless wisdom of the world’s theatre legends.
